Bryan welcomes big new class

Starting school means moving into residence halls, a job for the whole family. But student leaders were on hand in August to help new students find their rooms and move boxes, suitcases and even furniture into their new homes on Bryan Hill.

The dining room is a little more crowded, registration lines were a little longer and the residence halls are almost full.

Bryan College, 1998-99 edition, is open for business.

One hundred seventy-eight new students - the largest incoming class in more than a decade - helped push enrollment to 524, an increase of 6.8 percent from a year ago.

This growth can be seen almost everywhere, as more students vie for seats in the cafeteria, congregate at the mail boxes and gather in Rudd Auditorium for chapel.

But the pressures of growth bring with them the excitement of anticipating moving the cafeteria to the new Student Life Center in January.

Tom Shaw, dean of enrollment management, said the growth in numbers is a result of strategies adopted by his staff in the past several years.

"We attribute the growth in enrollment to a lot of hard work and innovative ideas. The targeted strategies we've implemented the past couple of years are starting to pay off."

New students start their Bryan experience with an orientation program - this year renamed "Welcome Week" - that introduces them to what to expect at college.

Dr. Peter Held, vice president for student life, said this year the orientation program will extend beyond the first weeks of school. "This year we are trying to expand student services to groups of students we feel we can serve better," he explained. "Tina Wade is responsible for the freshman year experience, from orientation at the beginning of school through the whole year. We want to

The President's Reception annually closes the first day of class, following Convocation. This year, the reception was held on the porch of the new Student Life Center. Here Dr. Brown gives a group of students an update on the new school year - or is it the best new joke he's heard?

Top Tier again!

For the fifth year in a row, Bryan College has been ranked among the Top Tier of Southern liberal arts colleges by U.S. News & World Report.

Rankings are based on information supplied the magazine and include evaluation of criteria including graduation and retention rates, size of classes, student-faculty ratio and percentage of students in the top quarter of their high school classes.

Tom Shaw, dean of enrollment management, said, "We're pleased to receive this recognition once again from U.S. News & World Report. Especially encouraging was an increase in our reputation rating from last year's report. We're striving to improve our level of excellence primarily for the benefit of our students, but it's always nice to receive this type of national acknowledgement of our quality."

The U.S. News data show Bryan is among regional leaders in the rate for students returning to the college after their first year and percentage of classes with fewer than 20 or more than 50 students.

Bryan's emphasis on strong academic performance is reflected in the fact that 59 percent of entering students ranked in the top quarter of their high school classes, and half the students scored between 21 and 26 on their ACT college entrance exam.

Mr. Shaw pointed out that along with a rigorous academic program Bryan is committed to a strong emphasis on personal integrity and service to the community. "In addition to our strong academics, a great majority of our students are active in programs of service to the community.

"We believe that when students graduate from Bryan College, they take with them both the academic training for a career and the life skills for living as servant-leaders in tomorrow's world."

make sure new students get what they need from us throughout the year."

"Get what they need" starts with Welcome Week, when pairs of upperclassmen lead small groups of new students through get-acquainted activities to start building personal friendships as well as helping them become familiar with campus life.

Students moved into their residence halls on Saturday morning as Welcome Week began. Moving chores were eased as student leaders and residence assistants, who had returned a week earlier for their own orientation, carried boxes, bags and even some furniture into dorm rooms for new students.

Dr. Held said only the ground floor of Huston is not full. And the number of men has grown to the point that Woodlee-Ewing is full and men have moved into the ground floor of Long.

The RAs and student leaders had come early "so we could try to inspire them with the idea of beginning a good year, getting excited

Leadership: Celebrity or character?

From the President

Dr. William E. Brown

The President is a celebrity.

In fact, he is a victim of the celebrity culture we have created in the United States. The reality of his celebrity status explains why we as a nation are struggling to respond to the conflicting role of the President as leader. Is he a leader or a celebrity . . . or both?

The Royal Celebrity

For most of human history, national leaders were kings and queens who claimed a divine right to rule. Some members of the royalty were very serious about their "divine" appointment. For example, King James I of England (yes, the "King James Bible" monarch) audaciously claimed, "The state of the monarchy is the supremest thing upon the earth; for kings are not only God's lieutenants upon the earth, and sit upon God's throne, but even by God himself they are called gods."

But divine right was no guarantee of competent leadership. The history of royalty runs through the extremes of bravery to buffoonery.

From the thirteenth century, there was Dimitri II, King of Georgia, known as "Dimitri the Devoted" because he surrendered himself to the Mongols in order to save his people. At the other extreme was King Farouk I of Egypt, a corpulent, womanizing racketeer and thief, who once actually stole a pocket watch from Winston Churchill.

Then there was Eric II of Denmark, known as "Eric the Memorable," although no one remembers why.

From a biblical worldview, monarchs were judged by their adherence to God's character and will, both in their public service and private lives. The kings of Israel were held to the strictest standards because they knew the revealed will of God, or at least were responsible for following it. They were judged by their obedience and righteousness, not by the prosperity of their reigns (see the evaluations in the books of Kings and Chronicles). Pagan kings were judged by their fidelity to common morality, the most obvious feature of common grace. The ultimate evaluation was not their approval rating with the public but their approval rating with God.

Royalty, for all its political power, lost its moral authority when the separation of personal morality from public service became its dominant feature. The public judged kings not by their personal character but by the fortunes of the kingdom. The people wanted three things from their kings: prosperity, protection and peace. The royal family provided fodder for jokes, news and entertainment. The roots of celebrity culture are found in society's need for the royalty, either as objects of worship or ridicule.

The royal family lived apart from the moral law that the average person followed. As Blackstone claimed in 1760, "That the king can do no wrong is a necessary and fundamental principle of the English constitution."

The royalty became a law unto themselves, often abusing the responsibilities of leadership by ravaging the privileges of wealth and power.

The Royal Temptation

The United States devised a government with no king; in fact, the Constitution prohibits formal royalty: "No title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States" (Article I, section 9).

So, the United States put an end to royalty before it got started - or did it?

The need for the social benefits of royalty remained and this need was first met by entertainment celebrities, not political leaders. Today, the celebrity mentality is the defining element of a secularized American culture.

"His Highness" has been replaced by "His Airness." Elvis is King, a glam-rock group is Queen, and Dukes live in Hazard County, Ky. Don't even ask about Prince.

In most countries, heroes make history; in America, heroes make movies, touchdowns or slam-dunks.

Celebrities are not real people. They are cardboard cutouts, designed to entertain. The American public cares little about the moral character of actors, sports stars or musicians. As long as they perform well, America is satisfied. It was only a matter of time before the political structure became infected with the celebrity culture.

The Celebrity President

The President's status as a celebrity is bolstered by his key advisors who are television producer Harry Thomason and spin-meister James Carville. Informational trial balloons help shape public relations and daily opinion polls guide decision-making. The details of how things "look" overwhelm the reality of how things "are."

The presidency was not always a celebrity icon. At the beginning, the people of the United States defined presidential leadership by personal character and integrity. Even the smallest peccadilloes were reasons to question a person's moral ability to serve as leader. Americans asserted that the morality of the leader was the foundation of his competence. The United States boldly separated itself from countries struggling under hereditary monarchies.

Historian Thomas Reeve's recent biography of John F. Kennedy (the first truly celebrity president), A Quest for Character, explores presidential morality. He notes that while courage, wit and intelligence are important, these qualities are in reality connected to "those values, known and declared for centuries that link good character with effective leadership. The United States - and now the world - cannot settle for less."

Leadership - Not Celebrity

While celebrity dominates the public mindset, true leadership remains unaffected. It still demands a moral basis of integrity and trust. We get a picture of this in the New Testament qualifications for leadership. The 13 qualities Paul lists for Titus all relate to personal character and integrity, not experience, education or ability (Titus 1:6-9). Admittedly, these passages apply to church leaders, but they provide a peek into God's mind with regard to leadership. God's evaluations are always radically different from ours: "The Lord does not look at the things man looks at. Man looks at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart" (1 Samuel 15:7).

Businesses, schools, churches - indeed every facet of American society - need leaders of character. I know that as the President of Bryan College, if I were guilty of sexual immorality, I would be out of a job tomorrow; so would most other college presidents, corporate leaders or pastors. Our positions are based on personal integrity and public trust.

Have we come to a point in United States history where the office of the President no longer requires a leader in the most honorable and courageous sense of the role? I hope not, but American popular culture is getting to the point where we not only encourage but demand a celebrity to occupy the White House.

Bryan's Rural Information Service Center has been named the Hanna Technologies Center in honor of the efforts of former President and Chancellor Dr. Kenneth G. Hanna. Dr. Hanna, '57, spearheaded efforts to secure the grant to fund development of the center, which allows Bryan staff to train personnel in use of the worldwide web and other computer technology. Trustee Chairman Glenn Stophel, left, presents a plaque to Dr. Hanna during a luncheon announcing the honor. Trustee Erwin Latimer is seated at left.

Presidential Scholars

Andrew Halbert Jr.

Andrew Halbert Jr. is the Presidential Scholar in social science.

Andrew is a graduate of Farragut High School in Knoxville, Tenn., where he was involved with the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps, ran track and was a member of the National Honor Society.

While he was living in Honduras with his missionary parents, he also played soccer and basketball in his high school there.

But changing high schools limited his involvement with other activities, so he is hoping to become involved with opportunities such as student government at Bryan.

He learned about Bryan while attending a college fair in Knoxville during his junior year. "I was looking mostly at state schools but my dad said I ought to pick up brochures from Christian liberal arts schools.

"I filled out some applications — Bryan was one of them — but I didn't know anything about the school."

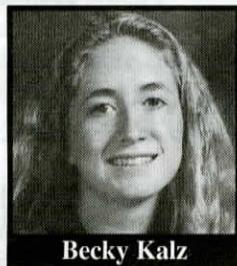

During his senior year he was leaning toward attending a state school, but the Lord closed that door and, a few months later, opened the way to attend Bryan when he received the Presidential Scholarship.

"My experience at the Presidential Scholar weekend showed me what the school is like and attracted me to Bryan," he said.

Andrew plans to major in business with a view toward an international business career. "I looked into mission work, but I think in international business I could do more good for a third-world country. I would like to work with a government or get a Christian organization set up to influence the people toward a more godly way of life."

Becky Kalz has received the Karr Family Scholarship for natural science majors.

Becky, from Somerset, Ky., is a graduate of Southwest Pulaski High School, where she was a member of the National Honor Society, the Spanish Honor Society, played soccer, ran track and field and was a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Becky Kalz

She learned about Bryan through a mailing from the college. When she received more information, she decided to visit the campus. While at Bryan the first time she tried out for the women's soccer team. A second visit in the spring confirmed her decision to attend.

"I was looking for a small Christian college," she said. The fact that Bryan has a soccer team helped her make her decision to come.

She plans to major in biology and is considering a career in nursing.

Becky plans to participate in one of the PCI ministries during her years at Bryan.

Sarah Martin

Sarah Martin, the Presidential Scholar in Biblical Studies, learned about Bryan College from information through the mail, then got her first taste of campus life by attending the Summit Leadership Conference a year ago.

Sarah, a homeschool graduate from Erin, Tenn., said the Summit experience "really piqued my interest. When I was visiting campus I felt this was where God was leading me."

She said she is looking forward to the intellectual challenge as well as the small class sizes of college life, similar to her experience at Summit.

As a homeschooler, Sarah had the freedom to participate in some activities traditional high school students often miss. She served as state president of the Children of the American Revolution, interned with a congressman in Washington, D.C., took missions trips to Honduras and inner-city Nashville, Tenn., and led a backyard Bible club for neighborhood children.

She also was involved in piano competitions and auditions and played for her church on occasion.

"The missions trip to Nashville was an important step in learning what God wants me to do," she said. "I'm not sure what will happen after I graduate, but I feel God is leading me into missions, either inner-city or overseas."

Sarah is considering participating in Backyard Missions, the Bible Education Ministry, student government, Hilltop Players or musical ministry during her time at Bryan.

Anndrea Mathers

For Anndrea Mathers, Bryan College is a family affair. Anndrea, Presidential Scholar in the humanities, is the fourth sister to attend Bryan following in the footsteps of Karyne (Mathers) Urquhart, '94; Alicia, '98; and Emily, who will be a junior this year.

But the family connection was not the most important reason she chose Bryan as her college. "The most important thing is the strong Christian position the college takes. Some Christian colleges aren't very theologically strong, like Bryan is," she said.

At the same time, having family members at the college gave her opportunities to be on campus regularly. "I know a lot of professors — they're really great. I really like them," she said.

Anndrea is a graduate of Southside High School in Greenville, S.C., in the International Baccalaureate program. This program requires students to complete their high school requirements in two years, then spend two years in college-level courses. Before receiving their diploma students must pass examinations covering all those courses.

But Anndrea did more than study in high school. She played soccer for two years, was a member of Beta Club, the National Honor Society and Interac (the Rotary-sponsored group for high school students). She also led a discipleship group for two years through her church.

She hopes to participate in Hilltop Players' productions and sing with the Chorale at Bryan, plans influenced by her visits to campus over the years.

Anndrea plans to major in communication arts.

Kerri Wenzel

Kerri Wenzel of Manchester, Md., is the Presidential Scholar in the Division of Natural Science.

Kerri learned about Bryan at a Christian college fair in York, Pa., but was generally aware of the college because her parents had attended a pastors' conference when the college held those assemblies in the summer.

The standards and values the college holds attracted her because "they are very similar to those of my church. The things Bryan holds as important are similar to what I and my church consider important."

She plans to major in biology and minor in music, and has a goal of becoming a physician's assistant.

Kerri is a graduate of North Carroll High School in Hampstead, Md., where she was in band, accompanist for the chorus for two years, editor of the yearbook, Fellowship of Christian Athletes vice president, ran track one year, a member of the National Honor Society, in student government for two years and was a member of the German club.

At Bryan, she said, she wants to find a church where she can become involved, possibly in music or in a puppet ministry.

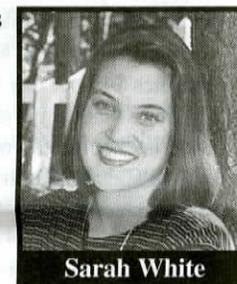

Sarah White of Marietta, Ga., is the Presidential Scholar in Social Science/Education/Psychology.

Sarah heard about Bryan several years ago at her church, but didn't become interested in attending the school until she came to Caravan several years ago and the Summit leadership conference in 1997. "I enjoyed Summit, what I learned about my biblical worldview - it was really interesting. I decided going to Bryan would be like being at Summit year-round," she said.

She chose elementary education for her major because "I have always enjoyed children. When I was younger I wanted to teach, but I kind of lost interest in that for a while," she explained.

"I was homeschooled through high school, but last year I took some classes at a school and had Thursdays off. I volunteered in a first grade classroom at our church school every week and really enjoyed it. I loved being with the children and teaching. I want to help instill the joy of learning into children."

Sarah played softball, took piano lessons and worked with her church's puppet team while in high school and would like to be involved with some type of ministry at Bryan, although she hasn't made any firm decisions in that area yet.

Dr. Ketchersid labors in Cuba

Bryan's globetrotting history professor added a country to his "visited" list this summer, and even saw a slice of American history while he was there.

Dr. Bill Ketchersid led a short-term mission to Cuba in July, for volunteers from United Methodist churches in Tennessee and Virginia.

For a week in July the eight team members helped with construction of a Sunday school building and residence for the pastor of San Juan Methodist Church in Santiago de Cuba, Cuba's second-largest city.

Dr. Ketchersid's visit was part of an on-going effort by the United Methodist Church in the United States and had official permission to enter Cuba for religious purposes.

The team members were touched by the poverty of the country and the people they met, but were impressed by their warmth and friendliness as well.

"The people we dealt with were very hospitable," he said. "Materially they were very poor, very low income. For instance, a skilled carpenter can make between 180 and 200 pesos a month, about $18 to $20. But prices are high, like we pay in the states, if people can get what they want."

And even though team members paid their host families $45 per day for food, "they had trouble finding what they wanted to buy because so much food is exported abroad from the collective farms."

The Cuban church is working to replace a wooden building erected in 1903 which served as the pastor's residence and a Sunday school building. Because the building has not been maintained, it is near collapse. Church members want to tear it down.

But government officials, considering the historical significance of the building, the only one of its kind remaining in the city, will not give permission for demolition. "They want the church to restore the building, but they can't afford that," Dr. Ketchersid said. "It's all right to let it fall down, but the church can't tear it down."

Team members dug holes and were planning to mix concrete for the foundation, but the church had not received the government permit to buy cement.

History Professor Dr. William Ketchersid, second from left, led a missions team from United Methodist churches in Tennessee and Virginia to Cuba this summer. They helped build a church Sunday school building and pastor's home.

"We worked from about 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., with an hour for lunch," he said. "But one day the government delivered the sand at 4 p.m., and the next day they delivered the gravel at 4 p.m., just dumped it in the street, and it took us about an hour to clean it up and move it onto the worksite."

The area of Cuba where the team served had been experiencing a drought, so the reservoir was low and there was not enough water pressure to serve the city. "We got filthy working, and one day our host told us we had a choice of taking a bath or washing clothes. But the bath was simply a little water out of a big bucket that held all the water for the whole family for the day.

"It was good to get home and get a real shower."

After work the group attended evangelistic services at the church in the evening. One of the team members had been a missionary in the area in the 1950's and did some preaching in the church. "You can preach in church, but it's against the law to preach outside of church," Dr. Ketchersid explained.

Despite official opposition to Christianity, the Church in Cuba is growing. The Americans were told that, especially since the Pope's visit, official opposition has lessened.

All was not work and worship. One day and one evening were devoted to sightseeing, which included El Moro Castle, built by the Spanish in 1612 and restored by the Cuban government, and San Juan Hill, where Theodore Roosevelt made his famous charge. "That wasn't much of a hill," he said.

Dr. Ketchersid said Cuba reminded him of his trip to Mongolia several years ago in that food, clothing and medicine are in short supply in both places. But Cuba did have a lot of American cars from the 1950s still running, something Mongolia doesn't have.

In addition to their labor, team members brought about $12,000 worth of medical supplies to the Methodist clinic in Havana. "It was a real blessing that we didn't have to pay the duty on it," he said.

And, while politics was officially "off limits," the Cubans he met still managed to convey their thoughts about Fidel Castro. "The older people seem to dislike Castro, but the younger people like him. The young people blame the American boycott for their hard economic times.

"The people seem to think conditions will change for the better after Castro dies, but they don't really know."

Benson explores new challenge for missions

The seven weeks Matt Benson spent in Europe this summer may prove to be the foundation for a new effort to challenge Bryan students to consider foreign missions as a career.

Mr. Benson, director of spiritual formation and leadership development, was invited to teach in Ukraine and Spain, and spent time visiting alumni, friends of the college and parents of a student in France and Germany.

At the Ukraine Bible Institute, he taught the Gospel of John to a group of 20 students as the last class before they graduated. In Spain, he met up with professors from Dallas Theological Seminary's Center for Christian Leadership and taught New Testament Survey to a group of 15 American college students.

En route from Ukraine to Spain, he spent time in France with Ray and Ruth Ann Gorrell, missionaries with Unevangelized Fields Mission, and in Germany with Herb and Penny Brasher, missionary parents of current Bryan student Julie Brasher and of graduates Jennifer, '96, and Heather, '97.

"We were exploring the possibility for one or two students to go overseas and be discipled by missionaries, not just given tasks, but to be worked with to be shown how missionaries really live and work," he said.

Vice President for Student Life Peter Held said this concept is a natural "fit" for the college. "Bryan College has a good reputation for sending out foreign missionaries. My concern is that this continues. It goes along with our being more deliberate with issues like that: What are we doing to see that the tradition continues of sending out good foreign missionaries.

"Matt approached me with this and said, 'Let me go do something as a precursor to future possibilities.' It's a leadership development idea, to develop leaders in the context of another country."

Mr. Benson said he is concerned that this generation of college students lacks a vision for missions, "so we are trying to encourage them to seek a vision." By providing opportunities for students to spend extended periods of time on a mission field with missionaries, he hopes they can see a personal need to become involved.

"My hope is to provide a mission interest for some students," he said. "We are talking about offering an extended trip, for more than the week that Break for Change offers, to let students face the reality of missions, the needs that are there."

He said his experience while with the Gorrells in France illustrates the advantages of such a plan. "Ray pastors a home church with just a handful of believers. They have a relational ministry with unbelievers in a powerful way.

"When I was there, when they knew I had been in India, we went to dinner one evening with some Hindu friends from India and we were able to share the Gospel. I want our students to be able to experience something like that."

Another part of his vision clarified when he was with Charlie, '79, and Sharon (Woychuk), '81, Goodman in Spain. "They are in a town of more than 30,000, and they know of seven believers.

"I wonder what it would look like to cultivate a relationship with alumni like Charlie and Sharon, to have an active relationship through the alumni office, to help students learn that 'all my life I need to be connected to missions.' I would love for alumni on the mission field to feel the natural thing is to come back to Bryan when they come home and meet students who can say, 'Oh, yes. You are so and so on such a field. We pray for you.'"

The next step in such a venture is planned for the summer of 1999, when Mr. Benson hopes to take a small group of students to India for two months. "The focus will not be as much on missions as on mentoring," he explained. "In the heat of a New Delhi summer, how do we live as brothers in a country where we have no option except to love one another? And how do we show those around us the love of God?"

This is an idea Dr. Held endorses enthusiastically. "A large part of my responsibility includes the spiritual life at Bryan College. I believe this is a step toward ensuring our missionary tradition remains strong."

Paul Ardelean to retire as alumni director

Fourteen years after he came to Bryan College — or 47 years, depending on how you count — Paul Ardelean is leaving his alma mater.

It's not that Paul, 55X, finally got his degree — he did that in 1955 from the University of Michigan, plus a master's degree to boot.

Retirement beckons, and he's ready to step into the next adventure of his life.

In the mid-60s, he and Janie were considering mission service. "In the summer of '68 we took a group of kids on a missions trip to Brazil for nine weeks. That trip encouraged us to apply to Wycliffe, and we went to Brazil for two years."

"I taught elementary school one year, then for one year Janie and I taught in a jungle setting."

Paul's administration as one of providing a "calm, fair, wise attitude which helped the student body. He applied principle and reason to situations, and he could communicate that."

And Ingrid (Krein) Morris, '90, saw Paul as a friend to students.

"When I was a senior I was living off campus. My mother sent me a check every month to buy food and one month the check was late. I was standing by the mailboxes looking for the check, and I must have been looking kind of pitiful. Paul pulled me aside and asked me if anything was wrong. I must have been desperate because I told him.

"He told me, 'That's what we have the Philippians 4:19 fund for. He gave me money to buy groceries and I repaid him when I got the check. That was what endeared me to him - how kind and gentle he was. His attitude made accepting the money OK. Being dean didn't just mean discipline to him."

Moving into the alumni field meant new challenges, including trying to link more senior alums with each new graduating class. "I tried to have a personal touch with alumni, to know them, to get into the field and see them. Of course, other alumni directors have tried to do that too."

During his tenure as alumni director the college became heavily reliant on computers and developed its first e-mail and world wide web capabilities. "Now we're able to connect with the alumni via the Internet."

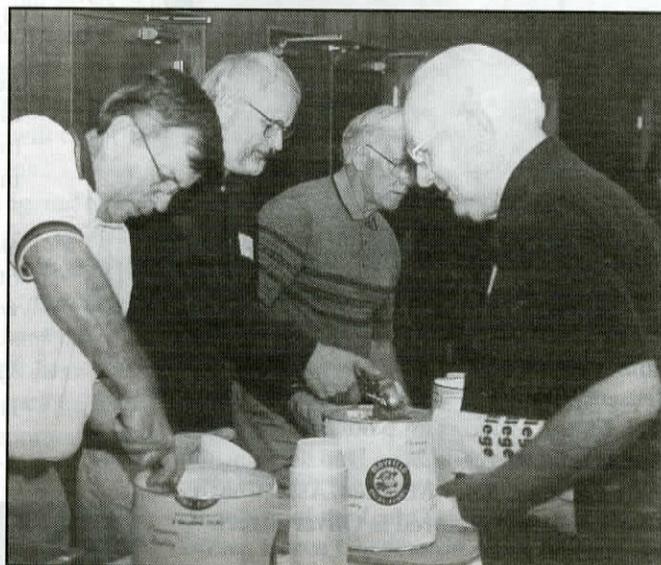

Bud Schatz, 56, president of the Bryan Alumni Association, said, "Paul is one of the last 'older guys' who will be missed by many senior alums. Having returned as an alum to work at Bryan added a great depth to the experience, especially in providing a living history that blended well with each new generation of students."

After the end of October, when his retirement actually happens, Paul is planning to spend some time volunteering in the Bryan maintenance and computer departments over the next two years. He also plans to develop an electrical hobby into a business - "I'm doing things like that for free now," he explained.

When Janie retires in two years, they hope to become involved in mission work trips or even longer-term service overseas. "There are all kinds of opportunities there," he said.

But whatever he does - or wherever he does it - you can be sure Paul Ardelean will be carrying the Bryan College banner with him.

He has too many years invested - however you count them - to leave that behind!

The duties of an alumni director vary, from presenting certificates to dipping ice cream, but Paul Ardelean has been able to handle them all. In the picture at left, Paul presents a certificate to new honorary alumnus Dr. Gerald Woughter as Vice President for Advancement Tom Kemner looks on. At right, Paul dips ice cream for Kermit Zopfi, '50x, while Bud Schatz, '56x, and Allen Jewett, '52, help during an alumni social.

Paul followed his older sister, Lois, 53X, to Bryan, after his father saw an ad in the Sunday School Times about the school. Later, his sisters Shirley (Fehl), 56, and Ruth, 61X, and brother, David, 65X, also attended.

"I didn't know anything about college when I came," he said. "We didn't have any college or career counselors in high school. I came here completely unaware of what was expected. I didn't do very well here because it was like a summer camp for me.

"I learned a lot and made a lot of friends that I'm still in touch with today. I worked for one - Stu Meissner, 56, former vice president for college advancement - and work with another, Dick Cornelius, 55, English professor."

He moved to the University of Michigan and graduated with a degree in zoology in 1955, then, with a view toward teaching at someplace like Bryan, went back to the University of Michigan to start work on his master's degree. But Uncle Sam invited him to join the Navy just after he began his master's program.

Although his studies were interrupted, while he was in school he was invited to a party where he met Janie Brown, a young lady he married during his tour in the Navy.

He served as a medical corpsman and, since he finished high in his training program, was able to choose his area of service. "I heard they had openings in Hawaii, so I went there and spent my two years there," he said.

When his enlistment was up, he joined Janie who was teaching in Lake Orion, Mich, completed his master's degree and began teaching elementary school in the spring of 1958. In 1964 he moved up to high school and taught biology and earth science

After two years, the Ardelean family returned to Michigan, where Paul taught three years before Wycliffe invited them back to Brazil. That tour of duty lasted nine years, two with Wycliffe and seven as tentmakers. For two years Paul served as a teacher, moved into administration, then served three years as headmaster of a school.

During their second time in Brazil, then Bryan President Dr. Theodore Mercer and Mrs. Mercer visited the Ardeleans while on a tour of Brazil. After that visit "I thought I would like to work in higher education, so I wrote Dr. Mercer and asked him what I needed to do to get into that field."

In 1983 Dr. Mercer called Paul, who was working in Plymouth, Mich., and told him the college was looking for a dean of men. "I came to Bryan in 1984, then succeeded Kermit Zopfi as dean of students when he retired."

Seven years later, then Alumni Director Steve Snyder left his post and Paul added that to his duties. In August 1990 Bud Porter was hired as dean of students, and Paul focused solely on alumni.

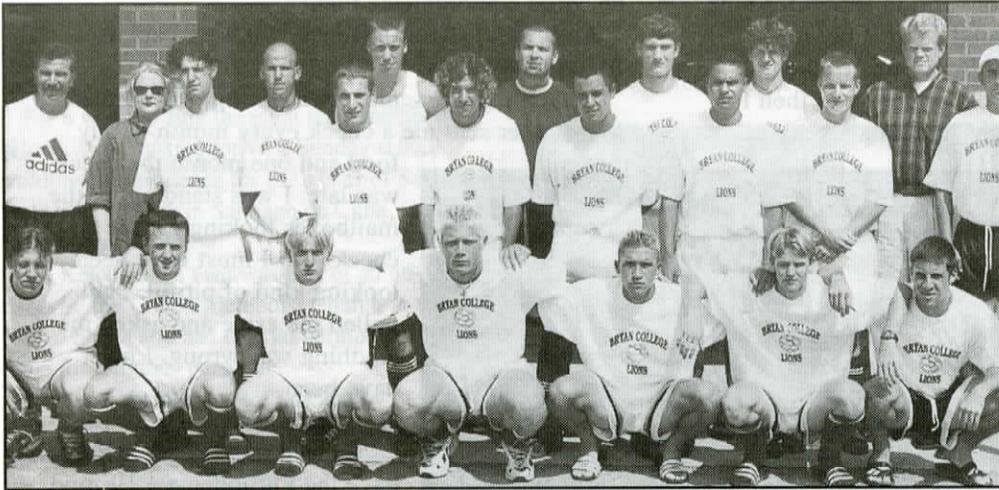

Looking at his years in the student development field, Paul said he is proud of the fact that "we started the department on the road to developing students, having what we called 'redemptive discipline.' We really began trying to salvage students in a discipline situation like SDO is doing now.

"We decided to set specific regulations and punishments, so students would know what was expected ahead of time. We changed the emphasis in student development from the externals, like hair length and clothing, to values, to moral and spiritual standards. Those really were there all along, but we emphasized them more than the externals."

Winning attitude, new talent boost soccer Lions

Talent, a desire for victory and a string of titles are making the Lions hungry for another outstanding soccer season this fall.

Coach Sandy Zensen said nine new varsity players will add depth to a squad that compiled a 12-7-2 record a year ago, won the NCCAA Mid-east Regional and finished fifth at the NCCAA national tournament.

But he is looking to his returning leaders to provide the on-field push to make 1998 another championship season.

"I'm going to rely heavily on Abe Hadzic, our anchor in the goal," Coach Zensen said. "He was an NAIA All-South player and third-team NAIA All-American last year. The team begins with the keeper, and ours is outstanding."

John Gosse, a sophomore midfielder "will cement the team for us," the coach said. John earned NCCAA All-America and TVAC conference honors last year. And Moises Drumond should prove a dangerous offensive player. "I expect him to jump to be an all-conference player this year," Dr. Zensen said. "He is quick, strong and understands the game really well."

Thanks to the recommendation of George Raev, '96, five players from San Antonio, Texas, have joined the Lions this year. Forwards Armando Durante and Vinnie Castillo; Peter McGrane, who plays midfield or offense; midfielder Daniel Mercado and his brother, "Chili" should "have an immediate impact,"

Dr. Zensen said.

Two other newcomers, senior transfer Tim Knox and freshman Phillip Douglas, are expected to make their marks early. Tim will add his NCCAA All-America talents to the defense. "He'll draw our opponents' top scorers as his assignment," the coach said. "He's a fine addition to the team. Phillip is big and strong. I believe he'll have a good career at Bryan."

In addition, Seth Jensen, Peter Mitchell and Nate Krogel have moved up from the junior varsity and Dr. Zensen expects them to see significant playing time this year. "They will become a stabilizing force," he said. "If we get in trouble, I expect them to step in and help. The JV program is really helping improve players."

Two characteristics of this year's squad are exciting to the coach, the talent and the desire to win. "We have the tools to challenge for the conference title," he said. "The issue will be whether we come together as a team, whether this group of talented players functions as a unit."

"Our goal is to win the conference and go to the NAIA regionals like the '96 team. This team is capable of that, but the competition is stiff. Everybody is building."

Third time charm? Coach Neddo hopes so

Coach Marc Neddo is hoping the third year will be a charm for the woman's soccer program at Bryan.

More players, better talent and greater maturity make him believe the team is graduating from "new program" level to a stage where the Lady Lions should be respected in the conference. "I'm looking for a higher level of play this year," the coach said. "I've seen it in the preseason already."

"We have better talent and more of it. We can play stronger players at more positions. That's helping with the continuity of the game. We have a faster team, more explosive. Some players have been with me for three years, and they're showing good leadership."

Returning players Coach Neddo is

Depth, experience keys for volleyball success

Experience, depth and mental toughness are keys volleyball Coach Jerri Beck is relying on to make 1998 a bright year for the Lady Lions volleyball squad.

"We are finally getting to the point where we have veterans," Coach Beck said. "There was a gap last year - no seniors. This year we are more balanced in each class. The upperclassmen, hopefully, will turn out to be exceptional players."

"Our depth is better, we have more solid players, which makes us more versatile and makes the team more competitive at each position."

The coach is counting on leadership from seniors Cheri Stone, a setter; Tina Johnson, an outside hitter; and Amy Lien, an outside hitter, to set the pace for the Lady Lions. Amy is returning after being sidelined by an ankle injury last year and brings both skill and a desire to make up for lost time.

Junior Jessica Miller, an outside hitter, "really stepped up for us last year. I'm looking for good things from her this year," Coach Beck said.

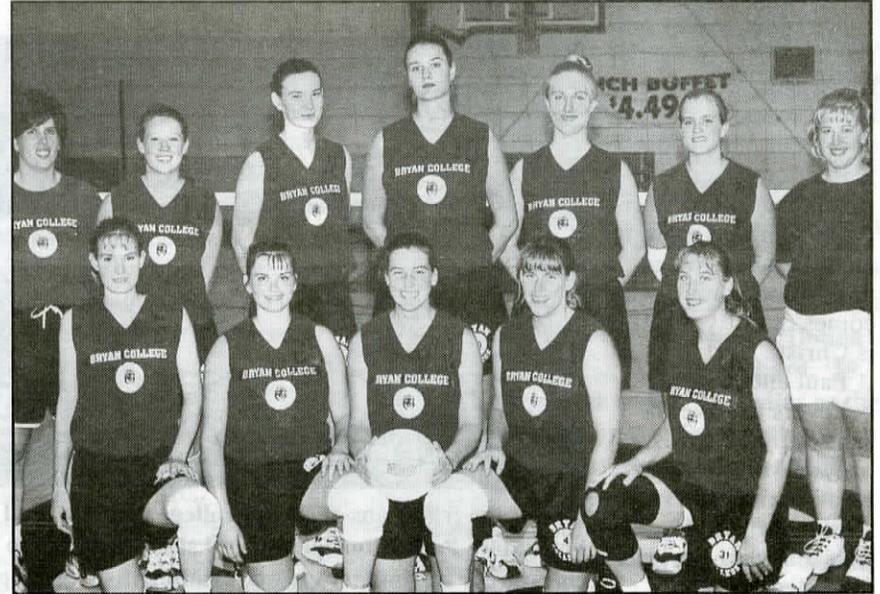

Freshmen Kelly Ambrose, an outside hitter, and Laura Verble, a middle hitter "both will be able to contribute this year."

Coach Beck said early practices have emphasized mental toughness as well as volleyball skills. "The talent level is rising, but we have to have the right mental attitude," she said. "We have done a lot of team-building activities this year which should help us if we will carry that over to game situations."

The coach said King, undefeated in the conference a year ago, along with Milligan and Bluefield, will provide some of the stiffest competition for the Lady Lions this year.

But, she added, "We have set high goals and expectations for the season. The most important goal is to glorify the Lord."

And, she pointed out, most of the volleyball team's home matches are early in the season, so she urged fans to come to Summers Gymnasium early and support the Lady Lions.

relying on include Melissa Vaughn, a senior, who earned first team all-conference honors a year ago.

"She will anchor our defense," he said. Tiffin Ashworth, a senior, was the team's leading scorer two years ago, but was sidelined a year ago by a knee injury. "She should help us up front. Her leadership is appreciated."

Melody Owens, a senior is "one of the fastest players on the team. Last year she played in the center of the field, but we'll move her to the wing where we can exploit her speed." And Amanda Hicks, also a senior, will use her experience and skills at defense. "She is a valuable asset," the coach said.

Newcomers expected to make an immediate impact include forward Angela Stewart, defender Adrian Dewhurst and midfielder Becky Kalz.

"I think everybody will see an obvious improvement" from last year's 1-21-1 record, Coach Neddo said. "We have a goal to flirt with a .500 record this year. We have improved, but our conference foes have gotten stronger as well. Several have gotten national team players, but I hope we can get to about .500 this year."

He said he expects defending conference champion Tennessee Wesleyan to be strong again. And perennial conference powerhouse Covenant will be gunning to regain the title it lost to Wesleyan. "I expect Milligan will be strong, and King potentially is the most improved."

"On a positive note, we beat Tennessee Wesleyan in a spring tournament this year. That shocked them and impressed our team."

Coach Neddo is hoping - and expecting - that that victory will prove a real confidence-builder as the Lady Lions enter their third season and strive to move toward the top of the Tennessee Virginia Athletic Conference.

about the responsibilities God has called them to," Dr. Held explained.

Capping off Welcome Week was the Spiritual Life Conference, with the Rev. Kenny Crosswhite, pastor of Grace Fellowship Church in Columbia, S.C.

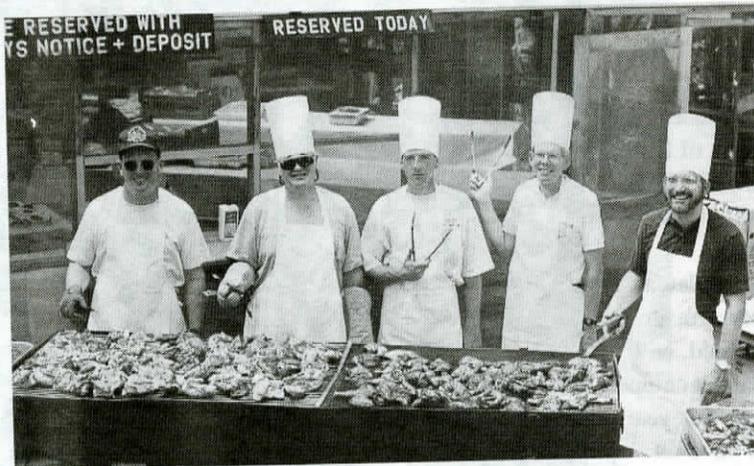

Speaking from Philippians, Mr. Crosswhite suggested that if we adopt the attitude Paul talks about in that letter, "Your life will be so full of Christ there won't be room for anything else. When opposition comes, what comes out of your life is Christ."

Paul encourages believers to have the same attitude Christ had, and to "work out what Christ has worked in you. If Christ is your life, He must become your attitude, your goal," Mr. Crosswhite said.

"Christ wants to complete us so totally that we're not going around looking for something to give us value, because He has given us value, and that is our strength.

In that strength and completion we can stand firm in doctrine and in harmony with each other."

In Philippians 4:4, the focus is to stand firm, rejoicing in the Lord. "We need help from each other to stand firm and rejoice," Mr. Crosswhite said. "Then he tells us to be anxious for nothing because God will never forsake us."

Members of the Admissions and Financial Aid staffs served ice cream to appreciative students, faculty and staff to celebrate the largest entering class in more than 11 years. Serving are, from left, Mark Cruver, hidden behind Dean of Enrollment Management Tom Shaw, Simon Sakatos, Melinda Snead and, back to camera, Financial Aid Director Anne Rader.

Dr. Gene Edward Veith Jr., professor of English at Concordia University in Wisconsin, spoke to faculty and staff at a dinner before his convocation address. Dr. Vieth saluted Bryan College for its strong Christian commitment. He said a school committed to the truths of Scripture offers the only true hope for providing a quality education in a world where real education is becoming increasingly rare.

"Christ wants to complete us so totally that we're not going around looking for something to give us value, because He has given us value, and that is our strength."

Some students want all the comforts of home in their residence halls, and bring seemingly everything but the kitchen sink to help reach their goal. Nathaniel Goggans carries a roll of carpet for one of the 178 new students who enrolled for the fall term.

Spiritual Life Conference speaker Rev. Kenny Crosswhite of Columbia, S.C., speaks with Rusty Kalenza following one of the services which opened the school year. Back is Tina Wade, student development associate staff, who was a member of Mr. Crosswhite's congregation in Columbia.

New year, new building mean excitement

To Alumni and Friends of Bryan
From Tom Kemner, Vice President for Advancement

Having grown up in New England, the first northeasterly breeze was a whispering reminder that the first day of school was not far off. I was reminded of that during a recent swing through the north country. If we were to wait for the first cool gust in East Tennessee, we would be well into October!

In late August, the metallic clatter of heavy machinery and the whine of power tools give way to more melodic conversation and laughter. I commented to some, I wish we'd had a video camera placed to catch the reaction of students as they ascended the hill and took in the many renovations which have taken place this summer - the most obvious being the work on the Student Life Center.

Building and progress stimulate excitement. As you read this, the new grass and landscaping will hopefully be taking root amidst the trees of the Triangle. The lower floor of the Student Life Center is being finished, as we await funding to address the main and upper floor. But clearly, Bryan College is far more than buildings.

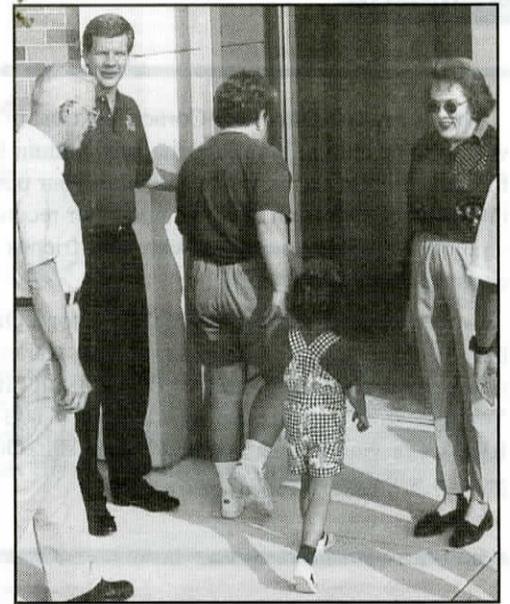

One student was heard to say from the back of the registration line, "Look at all these people!"...with the expectation that his next words would be, "How long will this take?" Instead, he added, "Isn't this great. These are the people I've been waiting to see!" The joy of reunion will give way to joy of pursuing academic preparation to make a difference in today's world.

From the reports included in this issue, you will take note of the quality and quantity of students enrolling this fall. The numbers challenge us in capacity. The quality challenges us to be our best. These students are highly motivated to excellence in their studies, making themselves the most effective tools for our Lord's use. Twenty-seven percent of these students are alumni of the Summit - just one reflection of their character and backgrounds.

Numbers also challenge us in funding. An increase of 6.8 percent is a tremendous encouragement that our message is catching hold, but to make Bryan accessible to these students we need to offer financial aid consistent with our history. Added to the challenges of the capital campaign, well...I think you know where this is headed.

On his deathbed, Dwight L. Moody is reported to have told his sons, "If God be your partner, make your plans BIG." Within what we feel has been wise stewardship and planning, our plans are significant to our personal checkbook and most of the people I know. However, God can do tremendous things, well beyond our imagination, as we pray and wait on Him. To that end, I invite your continued prayers on our behalf.

Dr. Bill Brown holds the door for Donna and Mattie Belisle, and Dr. Richard, '55, and Donna (Black), '57x, Cornelius as the faculty and staff gather for a back-to-school "picnic" in the new Student Life Center. The Argos catered the meal in the unfinished dining room as faculty, staff and their families got a first-hand look at the building, which is scheduled to open in January.

HAZEL (WALLER), '43, and Orville CARLSON were scheduled to leave Thailand late in July to arrive in Chilliwack, B.C., Canada, where Hazel will have cataract surgery. In March and April the Carlsons spent several weeks in Myanmar (Burma) to visit Maru Kachin people they have been working with in Bible translation.

ED, '39, and JOYCE (HIRSCHY), '40, deROSSET continue to contact friends in various cities in Peru from their home in Evans City, Pa. Reports from Peru tell of disasters from storms last spring which caused extensive destruction. Many businesses suffered great losses, and there are many unemployed. Church attendance has dropped, but believers have been helping each other and there are conversions and strengthened believers.

ED, '48, and JANE (SUTTON), '49, LIEB have joined the Woodlawn Baptist Church at their home in Crestview, Fla. Last March they were honored by the Brazil Gospel Fellowship Mission for their 50 years with that mission, of which 47 1/2 were in Brazil. In May, Ed received his 50-year anniversary diploma from Bryan College. NANCY, '77X, is currently in the U.S. and plans to travel with her parents to the West Coast visiting friends along the way. PAUL, '68, and Sandy TIMBLIN in Lemgo, Germany, at the Brake Bible Institute, report a good school year with sufficient funds to start renovation of their gymnasium and conference building. They enjoyed having DR. CARY PERDUE, '58, as a guest teacher. Paul and Sandy helped direct a tour to Israel and traveled with Brake students for their Genesis Presentation in Eastern Germany and Austria.

Daniel and CATHERINE (LEE), '68, FUNG are a traveling family who reside in Manhattan, Kan. Catherine traveled to Denmark, Paris and Bulgaria, and with Daniel, to Washington, D.C., Paris, The Hague, Mexico, Chile, Argentina and several U.S. cities. They also attended graduation at Princeton University when their son, Francis, received the Doctor of Philosophy degree in mathematics.

SALLY (CARLSON), '69, KELLER left her husband, Chuck, and three children in Cambodia on May 14 when she came back to Minnesota for surgery for malignant melanoma on her nose, but the doctors found out that it was not a malignancy, for which she is very happy. In Cambodia, Chuck is working with Krung men on production of primers, other booklets, dictionary and translation of the Bible. The Kellers are working with World Concern to improve literacy in the Brao language, beginning with the Krung dialect.

DOUGLAS, '69, and DENISE (SASNETT), '73X, FROEMKE have recently established their Mending Hearts Ministries with their church, Lakeside Baptist, in Greensboro, Ga. Three years after Kelli's tragic death the trial of the murderer was shortened when a guilty

John and JOYCE (BUICE), '70X, LARRABEE celebrated their 30th anniversary in Manaus, Brazil, and were able to attend a weekend conference at the Curupira Church in the Amazon Region, when they celebrated the church's 38th anniversary.

JACK, '71, and ESTHER, '72X, LILLEY planned to leave Mexico City by car in June for a month of ministry to churches and supporters and also have a vacation. This is the Lilleys' first ministry leave since going to Mexico in July 1995. The University in

Are Your Investments Maturing?

October is the month many CDs and other investments mature. If you have investments maturing in October, or any time, you may have a few questions. Would you like to increase your income? Would you like to turn appreciated assets into increased income without paying a capital gains tax?

The Estate Planning Department at Bryan College can offer some-tax saving ideas that may be just right for you. It may be possible to increase your current income. A charitable gift annuity or an income-producing charitable trust are just two ways many have found for providing security in their estate planning.

If you would like further information, please contact the Estate Planning Department (423) 775-7308. If you prefer, you may complete the following information and mail it to: Mr. Terry Balko, Estate Planning Department, Bryan College, P.O. Box 7000, Dayton, TN, 37321-7000. As always, information is confidential and is provided without cost or obligation.

Mexico City has asked Jack to teach a fall course on "Jesus of Nazareth" in the Department of Faith/Life integration. Students come from many majors and from the kinds of families that Operation Aztec is trying to reach.

JOHN, '72, and CLARICE (McCARTHY), '70, MAIN, have moved from Arkansas to Danville, Ind., where John is pastor of Hendricks Community Bible Church.

LEROY, '73, and BECKY (CONRAD), '72, NICHOLSON flew from Chicago to Pakistan in July, accompanied by Ben and Nathan. A problem that concerned them in Pakistan is the "blasphemy law" under which another Christian was recently condemned to death. This has resulted in riots and protests by Christians in Pakistan. They are thankful for the supply of English Bibles that has arrived in Pakistan for the correspondence students.

PAUL, '72, and ANNETTE (HENDERSON), '73, HAYWARD celebrated their 25th anniversary in February, which came close to being their last anniversary. Three weeks later Paul was robbed and shot as he carried their bookstore deposit to the bank. But they are grateful for God's protection and are glad to continue their ministry at the TEAM Christian Bookshop in Empangeni, South Africa.

Steve and JANICE (RASH), '74, TROSTLE completed the school year with a graduation which included their daughter, Stephanie, dedication service for the Lisbon Training Center and moving the school to a new building. The Trostle family planned for three months of home ministry from Portugal including a visit with Steve's family in Maryland and Pennsylvania and Jan's family in North Carolina. In July they were camp missionaries at two Pennsylvania camps.

LUCY LIEB, '76, completed her extensive travel schedule on home assignment under Brazil Gospel Fellowship Mission with two weeks of family fellowship with her parents, ED, '48, and JANE (SUTTON), '49, LIEB, in Crestview, Fla. They had a family reunion to include NANCY LIEB, '78, DAVID, '83x, and RUTH ANN (MADSDEN), '83, LIEB, and children; Celia and family, and John and family.

KEITH, '75, and FRANKIE (DILLINGER), '77x, PATMAN are residing in Kensington, Md. Keith continues his work with Wycliffe Bible Translators by translating Bible notes into French for field teams. Keith made a six-week stay in Cameroon this summer to help lead a workshop for translators working on the books of Titus and Philemon. Frankie completed linguistic studies at Georgetown University in May for a master's degree.

STEVE, '76, and MARCIA (KRICK), '78x, STRAUSS are encouraged with the fruit of their ministry at the Evangelical Theological College, where Steve is an administrator in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Eight students or alumni of ETC were among 10 Ethiopian men and three SIM missionaries who took the gospel to India for three months through an SIM related church.

NEIL MAGNUSSEN, '77, is back on staff with the University of Tennessee, Chattanooga. From 1980 to 1995 Neil was either sports information director or administrative assistant to the athletic director at UTC. In 1995 he left for a position with the Christian Business Men's Committee in Chattanooga. For the past year he has worked in marketing with CRI in Chattanooga. He and his wife, JUDY (WELCH) '79, live with their four children, two sons and two daughters, in Hixson, Tenn.

MIKE, '78, and KATHY (LEVENGOD), '79, HATHAWAY share their activities at TMM Ministries in Dayton, Tenn., at Cumberland Springs Bible Camp, where their theme was "Back to the Basics." Their current project of the Galloway Building includes finishing the inside, purchase of kitchen equipment and installation of a fairly complex waste system. They anticipate the new building will provide a fuller year-round ministry and will require a larger staff, which is one of their special prayer needs.

REBECCA (HUTCHINS) MILLER, '78x, has moved with her family to Lima, New York, from Ohio where her husband, David, will study church counseling at Elim Bible Institute.

DAVID SPOEDE, '78, has joined Beal Aerospace Technologies, Inc., as general counsel and will also assist with government relations. He will remain in Dallas, Texas, where he has lived for the past five years. Beal Aerospace is a privately owned and funded company designing and building large rockets for the commercial market.

David and ELIZABETH (ARNOLD), '78x, WIDMAN visited Bryan College in May with their children, Peter, 18, Ernest, 16, Joshua, 14, Caleb, 12, Christopher, 10, Jacob, 8, Brandon, 6, Amy, 4, and Emily, 2, along with Endri Karagoze, a foreign exchange student from Albania. David attended a business seminar in Nashville, Tenn. David does computer work and accounting for a contracting firm and Elizabeth homeschools. They also operate a farm near Sioux City, Iowa.

Dennis and Sue King of Willow Street, Pa., share a light moment with "chief" Cathy Robertson Barnette of Hope Mills, N. C., during Alumni Weekend in July. All three are members of the Class of '78.

FAITH DUGAN, '80x, directing the Child Evangelism Fellowship in Brooklyn, N.Y., area, registered 15 Good News Clubs with an enrollment of more than 400 children. On April 4 CEF sponsored a Party Club ministry in a local bank where Bibles were distributed to 79 children accompanied by 10 adults. The bank manager invited the Party Club to use their facilities for future community outreaches.

SUSAN WILLIAMS, '80, left for Papua New Guinea on July 24, to teach Wycliffe Bible Translator children in the school at Ukarampa. She has a two-year commitment to teach third grade there. She had been teaching elementary grades at Grove Avenue Baptist Christian School in Richmond, Va.

JAMES, '81, and KAREN (CROWDER), '80, ASHLEY and their three children keep a fast-paced schedule from their home in Dallas, Texas. James is executive assistant to Wycliffe's executive director, with offices at the Wycliffe Center in Dallas. They traveled to the Solomon Islands in July to encourage the translators and to establish goals and schedules for next year. Karen homeschools their two younger children, while 16-year-old Kent completed his junior year at Trinity Christian School.

DAVID, '80, and JILL (McCORMICK), '81, SIMPSON helped 33 individuals apply as short-term missionaries to serve at one of the New Tribes Missions locations. The Simpsons vacationed in Florida to visit Jill's family and some friends.

ALLAN, '81, and KATHY (KINDBERG), '82, COURTRIGHT shared in the year-long 50th anniversary of Wycliffe Bible Translators by participating in the 364-mile run from Kitty Hawk, N.C., to JAARS in Waxhaw, N.C., where the Courtright's are living. Kathy, one of 30 runners who carried a torch, covered 25 miles in five different legs of the relay, including one of the final laps through Waxhaw. In July Kathy traveled as an assistant coach with three Charlotte Eagle youth soccer teams to Sweden and Denmark.

CHRIS McCREADY, '81, married Jennifer Ottman on June 10, 1995. Their first child, Anna Ruth, was born on June 27, 1997. Chris works as a CPA and they attend Calvary Bible Church in Lusby, Md.

JERRY, '84, and CINDY (WILLIAMSON), '84,

WALKER, serving with Wycliffe Bible Translators on the support team in Papua New Guinea, recently spent eight days with Tommy and Konni Logan and their two daughters in the southern highlands of PNG. The Walkers heard the reading from the Gospel of Luke in the Kasua language, which was dedicated last March as the first completed book in that language.

MICHAEL, '85, and Tricia ALFORD, as representatives of a Campus Crusade sports ministry, are enjoying life in Cape Town, South Africa. Mike recently had the opportunity to be the announcer for one of the basketball games shown on national television — a special privilege for a sports missionary in Africa. Tricia is involved in a ladies' Bible study, sings at their church occasionally, cares for the family including Taylor and Megan, and is preparing for a third child expected in October.

DARRELL COSDEN, '85, graduated on June 26 from the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, with a Ph.D. in theological ethics. His thesis was entitled "The Heavenly Good of Earthly Work; The Nature of Work in its Instrumental, Relational and Ontological Dimensions." Darrell has accepted an invitation from the Donetsk Christian University (Ukraine) to serve as their academic dean. With his wife, Kristy, Brenton, 4, and Kayleigh, 2, Darrell will continue to live and work from St. Andrews on this and other related projects. They continue as missionaries with International Teams.

LEWIS, '86, and TERRI (GOODMAN), '86, ALDERMAN, announce the birth of Ben Kirkland on June 11. He joins brothers Robbie, 7 1/2, and Bryan, 5. They attended a mini-reunion at Columbia, S.C., with JAY, '86, and JAYNE (LAWSON), '87X, EFIRD; SCOTT, '90, and Cathy HUNT, DOUG, '86, and BETH (PRICE), '89X, SLOAN; DAN, '88, and Julie SNYDER; and RICK, '86, and PATTY (WIENS), '86, SWIFT.

VINCENT, '86, and Chinyere NWANKPA sponsored a dinner with African cuisine to present the work of Eternal Word Communication Ministries in Nigeria at the 1998 fourth anniversary and fund-raising dinner in Norwalk, Calif. They expect school to begin in their new building this fall in Nigeria. Vincent received the Ph.D. in intercultural studies from Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., in June. The Nwankpas celebrated the first birthday of their son, Chidinma, on Aug. 3.

Jonathan and BECKY (BREWSTER), '87, GRAVES announce the arrival of Nathan Philip on July 11. He joins brothers Evan and Ryan.

SCHAUN, '87 and DARLENE (MIDDLETON), '86, MYERS announce the birth of their daughter, Brooke Elizabeth, on July 19. Brooke joins her sisters Jessica and Brittany in Reading, Pa.

Beth, Alan and Cameron McManus

ALAN, '89, and BETH (HANNA), '91, McMANUS announce the birth of Cameron Alan on June 1, in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where Alan is teaching sixth grade at Academia Los Pinares.

Keith and HEIDI (NIEHOFF), '89, BARKMAN are working with the Western Bororo people in Brazil and doing translation in the book of Revelation, since the people seem to be interested in Jesus' return. A Brazilian has been checking the Jesus film script, and now they are prayerfully selecting people who will do the speaking parts. Keith completed a draft of verses in Luke to make a Jesus film book. They have also made the first check of about 30 Old Testament stories.

JACQUELINE LEE, '89, has been living in Oliver, BC, Canada, for the past several months. She spent two months in the U.S. visiting friends and returned to Canada to renew her passport and secure her visa to return to England in October.

Des and LYNNE (STEVENS), '71, HARPER have had time during their sabbatical year to read, study and pray as well as get prepared for the days ahead. They are continuing their focus on Luke, to take new initiatives in outreach to the Asian communities in their area. Des visited Tennessee in Feb. to be at the First Evangelical Missions conference in Memphis and to visit other churches and friends. Sheila and her cousin, Rebecca visited their grandparents as a surprise gift from Lynne's dad to her mother, REV. and MRS. EARLE STEVENS, '86H, for their 55th wedding anniversary.

The Bryan College Admissions Department has scheduled six on-line "chat sessions" on topics designed to help college-bound students in their planning process. The lineup for the sessions is:

Day	Date	Time	Topic
Monday	Oct. 12	3-6 p.m. ET	Admission
Monday	Nov. 16	7-10 p.m. ET	Scholarships
Monday	Jan. 18, 1999	7-10 p.m. ET	Admissions
Monday	Feb. 15, 1999	3-6 p.m. ET	Financial Aid
Monday	March 8, 1999	7-10 p.m. ET	Financial Aid
Monday	April 5, 1999	7-10 p.m. ET	Academics

Dean of Enrollment Management Tom Shaw invited interested parents as well as prospective students to participate in the chat sessions and find information which will help as they consider Bryan College specifically or college in general.

To participate in the chat sessions, go to the Bryan College web page (www.bryan.edu) and click on the chat link and follow the directions from there. If you already have a chat program (e.g. Microsoft Chat) on your computer, go to chat.bryan.edu.
